

Plagiarism notice

Aşırma bildirisi

Robert M. Califf MD and Daniel B. Mark MD

The editors of the American Heart Journal regret to inform our readers that a paper published in our Journal (Patel H, Rosengren A, Ekman I. Symptoms in acute coronary syndromes: Does sex make a difference? Am Heart J 2004; 148: 27-33), has been found to contain considerable material (text and tables) taken from another published manuscript (DeVon HA, Zerwic JJ. Symptoms of acute coronary syndromes: are there gender differences? A review of the literature. Heart & Lung 2002; 31: 235-45). The manuscript in the American Heart Journal neither cited the DeVon manuscript nor asked its publisher and authors for permission to reuse their data.

In the opinion of the editors, this violates both the copyright of the publishers of Heart & Lung and the ethical standard that researchers take credit for only their own work and give credit to others for theirs.

We regret that this incident occurred, and we assure our readers that appropriate steps have been taken at the authors' institution to assure that it will not recur. In addition, those authors may not submit or resubmit a manuscript to the American Heart Journal for the next year.

“Reprinted from American Heart Journal , Vol 149, Califf RM, Mark DM, Plagiarism notice, 743, Copyright (2005), with permission from Elsevier.”